Aboriginal Legal Services Windsor - Tort law cases are legal cases that deal with civil wrongs. If you have suffered injury or harm as a result of somebody else's negligence or intentional wrongdoing, you could be eligible to receive compensation in a tort law case.

The most common kinds of tort law cases comprise: negligence causing car accidents and medical malpractice and personal injury. Our company's lawyers will help you determine what charges should be laid against the accountable parties. Even parties indirectly involved with an action which caused you harm can be held accountable for damages. For example, the delivery truck driver can be held accountable for harming you in an accident, but so can the employer that hired the driver. Several parties may, in certain cases, be charged with negligence for the harm which you sustain.

Our tort lawyers are experienced at trying tort law cases. If you have been adversely affected by a civil wrong, call us for an assessment of your case. We would help you to understand your legal options and guide you through all parts of the tort law case.
